FRIDAY, September 25. COURT OF SESSIONS .- Before the Recorder,

Judge Lynck and Alderman Bonnell and Carman. SENTENCES. - Otis Allen, convicted on two indictments of forgery in the 2d degree, in passing counterfeit one dollar bills and having counterfeit money in his possession with intent to pass, was placed at the bar for sentence. The Recorder recapitulated the long career of crimes of the prisoner and its destructive effects on others-and sentenced him on the first conviction to the State Prison for 10 years, and on the second offence for 5 years; being 15 years in all. TRIAL OF THE REV ANTOINE VERREN FOR PERJURY RE-SUMED .- The Court resumed the trial of the Rev. Autoine

Verren, on an indictment for perjury.

Previous to proceeding with the trial Mr. Western of Counsel for the prosecution rose, and, addressing the Court, said he had observed in one of the papers of the City a partial and garbled statement of the facts on the trial of this case, calculated to have an injurious effect and to prejudice the minds of the Jury empanueled to try this case-and said it was what he had feared from one of the bired and pensioned presses of the City. He then read from the Morning Herald an article reflecting in very severe terms on the characters of De Bouillon and Barthelemy, and the contradictory testimony of the former, &c. The Court after bearing the article expressed their regret and datestation of the course pursued in making such comments and ordered the District Attorney to cite the Editor of the Herald to appear to-morrow morning to state why such comments were made in his paper. Mr. Camp, of the Herald, here rose and states that the Editor knew nothing about the article, and that he alone was responsible. The Court then said they would hold the author responsible. Madame De La Haye examined .- Said I am a native of France, spent part of my youth in Lorraine and part in Paris-have been eight years in this country and now reside in Amboy-came here to teach Miss Livingston, the grand-daughter of Mr. Depot, and lives in the family- then duced by a Swiss gentleman, a friend of both-was acquainted with Mr. Verren for a year, and then went to N. Jersey, and returning met him in the street, when he recog Verren took a great deal of interest in her as did his wife. Mr. Verren counseled her, as a friend, to go into the house of Mr. Bouillon to live-but whom she did not then know. Told Mr. Verren she did not like to go alone into a house, and might find herselt in bad company, but Mr. Verrea assured her the house was perfect in every respect. Mr. Verren then made a statement that surprised her very much, viz: relative to the character of Mrs. Rogers in connection with a gentleman, which she did not repeat to any onewent into the house of De Bouillon at the request of Mr. Verren in May, 5 years ago-continued there for one year. Mr. Verren said he was security for De Bouillon's rent. He advised me to go as an interest to De Bouillon and an interest to De Bouilion and not because he went security for the rest During the year I was at De Bouillon's house Verren made three or four ostensible visits in the lower story where Mrs. De Bouillon lived, and also called on her-myself and Verren were taculy hostile, therefore I treated him with politeness. After I had been there three months I observed that either Mr. Verren was deceived or had deceived me in the character of Madame De Bouillon. It did not suit me to sit next to Madame De Bouillon in Mr. Verren's church. Spoke to Mr. Verrenabout it in terms of great force which caused a [coldness towards me on his part. This coolness increased up to the winter when I received an invitation from Mrs. Verren to take supper at Mr. Verren's-accepted it but went distrusting the motives. Madame De Bouillon and myself were the only strangers there-Mr. Verren treated me with marked politenessthere was something occurred that evening between Mr. Verren and myself that occasioned ill feeling-Mr. Verren proposed to me to pay the debts of another person, a professor, who boarded with De Bouillon and owed for beard and rent, and also proposed to me to go where the professor taught and stop his pay. I told Mr. Verren I wanted all my money, as I wanted to take a house myself and establish a school under the patronage of Madame Chagaree, I did not refer to Mr. Verren. It was five or six months after this before I heard of any anonymous letters. Did not see more than when Madame Brunell sent for me and showed me an anonymous letter she had received and I recognized at once the writing of Mr. Bouillon. I would not read it after seeing the first line. Met Mr. Verren in Broadway and told him generally that the family of De Bouillon was the cause of agreat deal of trouble to me-did not speak to him about the anonymous letter .- Mr. Verren said, how do you want me to interfere-I know you have an ustavorable of me. I antwered I honored him as one of the Ecclesiastical order and as a man of education, but 'thought no more ! than I could honorably avow. A few weeks after I wrote a note requesting him to call-it was after I heard of more. anonymous letters-he came and I stated that I had sent for him as a protector of myself-that I had supposed the int; or young woman. The prosecution here rested. Verren answered he did not know any thing about it—that they expected to adduce might lead. He speke of the sa as for Mr. De Bouillon he had not wit enough to write such | cred character of the defendant, of the enormity of the a letter or would not have dared to have entrusted him charge, and of the necessity of strong and powerful testi (Verren) with the knowledge of his having written such a letter and he should not trouble himself about it. I told him that not much talent was necessary to write such coarse, vulgar letters as I understood they were. He said oh no, not so coarse-for he had seen one of the letters. He concinded by saving he would do nothing about it. He seemed to revolt at the idea that a vulgar or illiterate man could write such letters. This was in the month of August, four years ago. At his visit Mr. Verren spoke of the French Consul and used the same language as contained in the published book. This was the last conversation I had with Mr. Verren. I recollect some expressions used by Mr. Verren relative to some ladies which he stated the French Consuwas said to have called his guardian angels. He also spoke of the Consuls in such terms as are contained in the letter. I had an interview also with Mr. Verren two months before the publication of the book, and after Mr. Verren was on had terms with De Bouidon. About this time the deport ment of Mr. Verren towards sae was greatly changed for the better. He and his church had been burned out, and I called at Mr. Verrea's house to inquire after the health of the family. He speke with great respect to me-th's was two months before the publication of the book. Met Mr. Verren in Broadway when he said if he had known where I was he would have called upon me. I was greatly surprised at the change in his conduct and supposed it to arise from the fact of his misfortunes-he asked me to call and see his wife and asked me why I did not come in when I called and rung the well. I teld him I lived in the family of Mr. Campbell at Brooklyn-received an invitation from Mr. Verren, which was left for me at Mr. Campoeli's, few days after the meeting in Broasway. I went according to request and was received with great politeness by Mr. Verren and wife. Told me a friend of his wished an instruct-letter produced but sot read. that trial except the one sent to Madame Brunell-asked hind a man; it is another thing to swear in Court on a Bi between De Bouillon and his wife and tried to pacify them-he got it into his bead that I was taking the part of his wife-I intended at one time to leave the house but for fear of offending Mr. Verren concluded to remain. Did not visit the bouseafter I left as I had a profound contempt for Mrs. De Bouillou-put not for him.

The Court here took a recess to 44 o'clock.

The Court at 41 o'clock resumed the trial of Rev. Antoine Verren for perjury. M. Western rose and called the attention of the Court to a publication in the Aurora of this morning--(to show that he cherished no hostility to any particular paper)-which be considered as asulting to the jury, highly reprenensible and calculated to interesere with the administration of justice &c. Mr. Maxwell of Counsel, rose and remarked that as the aracle bore upon them he hoped the gentlemus would not give nuiser any trouble about it as he treated all such articles with the contempt they merited. Mr. Western made a lew remarks by way of rejoinder, and the paper having been handed to the Court, the matter dropped.

Mrs. De La cheje, re-examined by the Attorney General -The reason I and Lo., on the former trial, relate as fully as I now have done the conversations between Mr. Verren and mysell, was because I was not asked the same questions, and because she was esecked, interrupted, and embars assed by her interpretes, who told her she need not say certain things as he would not a peat them. In my direct examination I said I asked Mr. Ba thalemy what course he intruded to pursue. meaning when the trail would come on as I was auxious to have for France. Mrs. Marie Brusel examined.-I live at 165 Leonard st have live, here so years-I received an anonymous fetter through me rot mice, but it was so long ago that I cannot recollect its cout any-thinks the copy shown is something ike the one sac occurred, but it was torn up and thrown out of the window by Madame De La Haye-that was the only time Madame De La Haye ever called on her. Gideon Merle sworn .- I was present at the former trial-

Examination objected to and stopped. Louis de Bouillon re-called, and examined by the Attorney General.-Papers shown. I have seen these papers before, at Mr. Verren's house, in his study room. They are in the hand writing of Mrs. Verren. I saw them three or four weeks after Mr. Verren had given me the anonymous letters to copy, viz: in June or July. Mr. Verren said to me he was preparing in his own mind some letters against Mrs. de la Haye, and I must call again to morrow. I called the next day at 12 o'clock, and Mr. Verren took a piece of written paper into his room and entreated his wife to copy it, which she did. Mr. Verren kept the original and gave me the copy, charging me to take copies from the copy and to put them up on the door of Madame de la Haye. That is the copy made by his wife. The copy of the second letter I was to send to Madame Davis through the Post Office, but did not. I was to put up something else on Madame de la Haye's door. I told him I did not put them up for fear of being detected. This was a second conversation. Mr. Verren told me be had met a Mr. Canda, and from what Mr. Canda told him he feared Mr. Canda suspected him of being the author of the anonymous letters; and the only way to prevent such suspicion was for me to go on and write other anonymous letters. When I told him I had not sent the letters to Mrs. De La Haye, he told me to send them .-I told him, no. I was afraid to be detected. He advised me to go to Madame Davis, ring the bell, and give the letter to theservant. I refused a ain, saying I was afraid of being recognized, although I did not know the servant. He advised me to disguise myself, buy a pair of mustachios, longones, and put on my lips-told me to go to a person who sold hair and get them. I proposed to do it. I told him if he would go and buy them himself I would put them on my lips and wear them. He did not choose to go: was astonished at my refusal and the conversation dropped -The paper to be posted on Mrs. De La Ray's door was adwent into the French school of Madame Chagre- became dressed to "Fellow Citizens, if you want your daughacquainted with Mr. Verren about 6 years since-was intro- ters taught intemperance from drunkenness to prostitution, send them to the old demijohn who keeps this house -she having practised it for filty years in Europe," &c .-The one to Mrs. Davis purported to be addressed by 'Mrs. nized her. I was living with Doctor Rogers then as a De La Haye to her, asking for some demijohns, or even a friend and instructress of his daughters—at that time Mr. pint of liquor, &c. Cross examined by Mr. Hoffman-After Mr. Verren had spoken to me on the subject of the anonymous letters, he requested or entreated his wife to make copies of more of thers, and she sat down and make copies of two, one to be placed on the door of Mr. De La Haye, and the other to go to Mrs. Davis. Here in the cross examination the same testimony of witness was repeated nearly in the same language as before. Mr. Verren was afraid of being detected sooner or later if he purchased the mustache himself. I told him it he would buy the mustache I would take the lettersknowing that he would not do it for fear of detection. I dont remember whether Mr. Verren asked me to return hi those copies of letters or not. I kept them up to a certain epoch, when I gave them to Mr. Bartholemy. I believe they were given before the publication of the book. I don't believe they were inserted in the book. Mr. Verren gave me no reason why he got his wife to copy the last letters that I might capy from her copy, although I had copied from his own writing before. His wife did not express an astonishment at it in his presence. Dont recollect what passed in my mind at the time. I think I must have promsed Mr. Verren to put the letter up at Mrs. De La Haye's oor, and to deliver the other at Mrs. Davis' door; but cannot say whether I intended to do it or not. I remember I was terrified in making the copies of the first four letters, and sending, and the second were of less importance than the first, and cannot remember whether I was horrified or not in regard to them. Direct resumed.-Mr. Verren wished to write new letters or me to copy, to do away with the suspicions of his being the author of the former letters, in which latter letters he was to use a new set of sentiments. Cross-examination resumed.-I slept in prison last night [Here it was admitted by the Attorney General that the witness was still in prison for the fine imposed at his convition, which he was unable to pay, he having served out hi term of imprisonment long since.] Winness tould not tell whether he was to be liberated if Mr. Verren was convicted

John A. Turdy, sworn .- I am an American, but a French cholar. [A letter in French, and the translation in English put in his hand to examine whether the translation, it terlineations and all, were correct.] It is almost impossible to make out what the interlineations are, at night; I wacalled on by Mr. Morrison, Connsel for one of the partie at the former trial, to make out a correct copy of the lette in French : declined, but finally at his pressing request did so in French, and this copy is now here; I cannot say positively whether the English tran-lation of my French copy Is exactly correct at this time of night; the letter D to th svord used relates to a married woman, the mother of family; the D being struck out makes it relate to a single

Mr. the defence, stating the general result to which the evidence mony to convict him; not that his sacred character should screen him if guilty, but that the evidence should be con clusive, in order to find a verdict of guilty.

After a very eloquent exordinm, Mr Hoffman read the affidavis of Mr. Vecren, on which the present indictment for perjury was founded. It states that the anonymous letter: that had been received were written by De Bouillion that he was induced by his wife to copy, and that De Bonlitton copied them, and then purloised both the copies and the originals, and gave them to Barthelemy to publish, in order to extort money from Mr. Verren in order to suppretheir publication; that failing in this, the publication was made; that he expected to prove that De Bouillion said be had stolen the letters and copies in order to get money from Mr. Verren or to ruin him, &c .- closing with a brilliant pe

Peter Daniel Formal called and examined by Mr. Hoft. man -I am a teacher of Spanish and French: have been here 7 years; am acquainted with the parties; been a mainted with De Bouillion since 15.9, and was very int rate with him ustil February, 184 . Mr. De Bouilion was ontinually talking against Mr. Verren every day and even og; said that he intended to write a book against Mr. Ver ren, the tendency of which would be to make him lose h church and leave New-York. I often reprintanted De Bouillion (but he did not heed me) for endeavoring to destroy the reputation of his countryman. I asked him what materiel he had to produce against Mr. Verren: he said a great many; he said some anonymous letters written by Mr. Verren-he went to his trunk, took them out and said, "Look at this." He said, "I have written at any anonymous lettess to kis vestry and to his friends." He, De Bouillion, said, "I wro e those anonymous letters and left them wit Verren, who was wicked erough to take copies of them. I then went to Verren's study and took both the originals and the copies, and said, 'look, what a powerful arm I have.' I destroyed the letters, told him he would be found out; I which I did-this is the last time I saw Mr. Verren, but had seen plenty of anonymous letters in my day. He said wrote a letter to him, and it was answered by his wifewho would be believed. De B. said, what is it to swear in a Protestant Court, showed all the other letters to me. I did not know Mr. and upon a Protestant Bible; he said he had as many wit-Barthelemy and called on him—have since seen the letters in an Ecclesiastical Court—I then wrote a letter to Mr. Verren, and informed Mr. Barthelemy of it. The object of writing to Mr. Verren was fears for himself and his family as I did not believe Mr. V. the author of those letters. Saw De Bouillon before the Grand Jary. Have visited Mr. Barthelemy two or three times at his house, with intent to learn man. Mrs. De La Haye also is my crony, and between what was my situation in the premises, and what were his them he had lost many of his scholars. I said it was had to views for the future. He said he did not wish to remain and condemn a man who has been your benefactor. He said der the weight of the sentence he did not deserve. Occu- usless he gave him $1500 he should not preach in his Churchpied a third stery room in De Bouillon's house. There and that he should go from New-York. De B. said that was some difficulty between me and De Bouiltion's impo. Colon Bartholemy and he agreed to publish a book, and liteness and particularly to the impoliteness of his wife. De | send a copy to Mr. Verren, and get $5,000 or $4,000 from Mc Bouillon never threatened me. Saw a bad understanding | Verren. De Bouillon, Co an Bartholemy, and another-Verren. [The four letters shown] They look like the letters he showed me, only there were no laterlinentions in them, nor the letters A B C and D upon them at their head. De Bouillon sand he had many letters from Mr. Verren, and knew his hand-writing so well that he can imitate it so that Mr. Verren could not tell it from his nwn. He said he was Mr. Verren's private Secretary; told this ta Raytholeny. He said he was not neisage Secretary. this to Bartholemy. He said he was not private Secretary to Mr. Verren, but he told them so. I told str. Whiting the same facts that I have told to day, at the time of the other trial. I am 60 years old, and was never examined as a witness before. Thave never spoken to Bartsolemy in person of De Bouillion. Adj urned to Saturday, II o'clock.
